

Fort Worth Report Fellowship

The Fort Worth Report has openings for our paid spring fellowship program. We are a nonprofit, nonpartisan news organization with an emphasis on free, fair and local news. This fellowship provides aspiring journalists the opportunity to sharpen their journalism and multimedia skills and to learn with our exceptional news team.

These positions are part time and designed to work around your class schedule.

We seek three fellows in the following areas:

- Social Media. This fellow should be well-versed in social media, and be able to dive in and help our social media team grow our social footprint. This fellow should be an expert in the usual platforms, such as Facebook and Twitter, but be willing to help us grow our Instagram (including Reels) and Reddit following and perhaps establish a new presence in arenas such as Tik Tok.
- Video. This fellow should have strong skills in video production. The video position will be responsible for shooting and producing videos to accompany news stories, videos that stand alone and promotional videos for the organization. We have available the full suite of Adobe programs to edit and produce videos. The fellow will need to have a camera; we will reimburse for equipment insurance and other business-related expenses.
- Reporting. This fellow should be ready to dive into daily news and enterprise coverage alongside our seasoned reporting staff. Ideal candidates will have experience in community journalism focused on the local topics of government, health, education, environment, business, arts and culture, and changing demographics.

We don't expect our fellows to know it all. You will be paired with a mentor who will help develop your skills. Show us your potential and desire to grow with our startup nonprofit news organization. If you are a college student, or recent grad, please apply.
